GORDON MATTA-CLARK

Phaidon, 2006. PaperBack. Book Condition: New. Born in New York and trained in architecture at Cornell University, legendary American artist Gordon Matta-Clark (1943-1978) broke from the traditional path of creating architecture and was intrigued instead by buildings about to be destroyed. He forced his way into abandoned apartment buildings in the Bronx and, using a chain saw, sliced up walls and floors, exposing the structuresâ skeletal core. In 1974, his work shifted from urban apartments to suburban homes. Splitting, his...
